

Professor Linhai Mei's Introduction

Linhai Mei, male, born in March, 1959, doctoral degree. Professor of School of Economics, Jinan University, the director of Japan's economy research centre and rural development research center.

In 1994, studied in Nagoya University of Japan, earn the agricultural economics master degree and doctor degree. In 1992, visited the North Dakota State University in America and in 2002, visited the University of British Columbia in Canada. In 1999, settled in Vancouver, Canada. In July 2002 came to Jinan University worked as a tutor. For many years doing theory research and teaching in Japan, Canada, the United States and China's college, achieved many research achievements. In recent years, had finished more than 20 various scientific research and international cooperation projects. Published more than 30 articles in Europe, Japan, USA, Malaysia etc. in English or Japanese, and most of them are International publishing magazines. Joined in international conferences for more than 20 times, and read the paper.

In domestic, successively presided, participating in the projects including national ministry of science and technology. Developed more than 20 research projects and published more than 30 research papers. As one of the editor, edit the grain of economic and technological dictionary, published by China's commercial press. In 2003, published an English academic study monograph of 200 thousand words titled "Changes of Food Supply & Demand in China and Their Political Implication" by Jina university press and a Enterprise management textbooks.

Now is undertaking 2 research projects of the national ministry, 1 research project in Guangdong natural science fund, and 1 introducing talents fund of Jinan University. Hosting Japan's international exchange fund of international cooperation and the other two projects. Undertaking undergraduate, master, doctor's education and guidance. Doing academic speeches and academic exchanges in Japan's Nagoya University, Ritsumeikan University, University of Hyogo, Soka University, Osaka university of economics; Thailand's National Institute of Development Administration; Korea's Pusan National University on resources, environment and economy. Published the academic report "China's environmental and sustainable development" and "China's resources and environment of the market" Japan's international regional development.